AIDS 2016

Return to South Africa

2000: South Africa is at a boiling point

Frustration with global inaction on access to HIV treatment reaches a boiling point.

The Conference becomes a platform for anger and activism-- and the world listened. Several public HIV treatment programmes in Africa begin within 6 months of conference.

2016: AIDS response in South Africa has been transformed

15 years later, more than 15 million people around the world are on treatment.

There have been accelerated advancements in scientific research and significant increases in life expectancy by more than a decade. South Africa is now home to the largest HIV treatment program in the world.

The Legacy of the International AIDS Conference

2008: Mexico City

At the conference, the President of Panama announces the repeal of the last remaining law in Latin America criminalizing homosexuality.

2012: Washington, D.C.

As part of agreeing to host AIDS 2012, the United States lifts its 22 year travel ban that prevented people living with HIV from entering the country.

2014: Melbourne

After being criticized for unfairly targeting and stigmatizing people living with HIV, the Australian government pledged to repeal the national HIV criminalization law.

Durban: Setting the Global Stage

Much like its 2000 predecessor, the 2016 conference comes at another critical moment in the HIV epidemic. It will provide a global platform to raise awareness about the work that remains to be done to make the end of AIDS a reality.

This year, as we take on the challenge of new global targets, the 21st International AIDS Conference (AIDS 2016) will play a pivotal role in setting the HIV/AIDS agenda for the next 15 years.

AIDS 2016 At a Glance

Beginning on Nelson Mandela Day, AIDS 2016 promises to be an historical moment bringing together:

- 18,000 attendees and 1,000 journalists representing 180 countries
- High-level participation and performances
- A best-in-class programme with more than 500 sessions, workshops, and programme activities
- The most inclusive and representative AIDS conference ever – doubling the number of scholarships and creating specific mechanisms to support attendance by people living with HIV, women, and youth
- Digital platforms and engagement for a virtual conference experience

Access, Equity, Rights - Now

The AIDS 2016 theme reminds us that all our gains will be lost if we do not continue to build a strong global movement to change the course of the epidemic. Responding to this call to action, some of the key issues at the conference will be:

The epidemic among young women and girls

Implementation science and the gap between discovery and adoption

New vaccine and biomedical prevention trials in Africa

Ending pediatric AIDS

Universal access and financing the response in middle income countries
